At the Creative Summit in New York last month, Adobe CEO Shantanu Narayen said that “AI is to creativity what the internet is to information” and “AI is all about enabling creativity by using machine learning to solve problems,” and showcased how Sensei helps them do that by powering interesting new creative tools in Photoshop for 2020. The Future of AI at Adobe Photoshop is bright, with exciting new possibilities at our disposal. The introduction of Neural Filters in Photoshop is one of the many examples and Adobe has extended its promise to empower its content creators to create and work with AI. This AI finds powerful new ways for us to leverage creativity for insight, empathy and collaboration. “We’re transforming the digital realm using the power of AI to enrich and inspire people’s lives,” said Elmar Deutscher, CEO, Adobe. “Adobe has always been at the forefront of AI innovations with Adobe Sensei. Now, with the widespread adoption of AI into Adobe products, we’re helping our content creators make better use of AI to be more creative in their work.” “With tools like Neural Filters and new Adobe Sensei features in Photoshop, Adobe are really pushing the boundaries,” said Gareth Blaber, senior enterprise editor, Computerworld, “AI technologies like these have the power to transform the way we design, create and interact with digital tools and content.” Tapping into an AI deep learning model to come to a solution is what Photoshop element was always good at. Now, Adobe is also adding AI features to make it even better. These include a brand new selection tool based on machine learning and AI. Also, the normal tools for layers and transformations are also getting some immensely useful new features.
